CARNIVAL

Snohomish County

Thursday, October 28, 2010 | 8 AM - 3 PM
Western Washington Sheet Metal Training Center

On Thursday, October 28th, more than 500 students from across Snohomish County will have the opportunity to speak directly to apprentice and journey-level workers, frame a house, operate a crane simulator, build a sheet metal tool tray, fire a nail gun, use a radial saw, cut glass, and lay tile and brick. While they try their hands at real job-site skills, they'll be learning about apprenticeship and training opportunities that lead to high-demand, high-wage careers in the construction and building trades.

Workforce Development Council Snohomish County and the Construction Careers Partnership have been hosting this successful hands-on career event for three years and are thankful for their continued partnership with the Western Washington Sheet Metal Joint Apprenticeship Training Committee, that allows us to hold the event in their Training Center free of charge.

Putting on a successful event requires the dedication of many volunteers from the local construction trades as well as funding from other sources. Funds are needed to cover the costs of bus drivers, substitute teachers, student lunches, and student safety equipment.

It is for these items that we are requesting sponsorship from local businesses and organizations interested in construction careers and/or career development opportunities for youth. Please review the attached Sponsorship Level sheet, which outlines the levels of giving and their benefits to your organization.

With your help and sponsorship, the 2010 Snohomish County Construction Carnival will continue sending the message to students that the construction industry has many career choices.

If you have questions or need more information, contact Sam Samano at Workforce Development Council Snohomish County at (425) 921-3419.

Thanks again,

Sue Ambler, CEO
